An Independent Financial Professional
will help you secure your financial future.

Choosing Financial Independence

It's Your Financial Future and It's Personal

Working with an independent financial professional is personal. Hazard and Siegel's financial representatives are independent business people who have chosen to make a total commitment to professional financial services. Every decision they make is made in your best interests. Leveraging the resources of the Hazard and Siegel network, your financial specialist is free to choose the best solutions for you.

Our Focus: Seeing the Big Picture

A solid financial strategy takes into consideration your financial goals, current financial status, and which stage of life you are in. From your first job to starting a family to planning for retirement and everything in between, an Independent Financial Planner will take the time to understand you, and your financial goals.

Independent Financial Guidance

Independent financial professionals are free to make the best decisions for you because they are not tied to any particular investment company, mutual fund, or investment product. Your goals and financial situation are unique, and an independent financial professional has the freedom to provide financial guidance based on your best interests.

Building a Lasting Relationship

Financial goals change over time, and our financial professionals will be there to help no matter what stage of life you're in. We offer retirement planning, family financial needs, college planning, long term care challenges, investment strategies, wealth management, estate planning, insurance needs, and wealth transfer. Whatever your need, our financial guides will work with you to achieve financial success.

A fee structure that works for you

An advantage of working with our financial professionals is the option to choose how to pay for our services. Two options are available to you, the first involves an upfront commission with an ongoing servicing fee, the other is a fully disclosed set fee based on your portfolio. Some clients choose separate fees for different portfolio segments, based on the financial goals for each. Whatever you choose, be confident that your Hazard & Siegel representative will do what's in your best interest.

A Hazard & Siegel representative belongs to a network of registered investment advisors, insurance professionals, and investment brokers that provide a full range of financial and insurance solutions to grow your assets and protect your wealth.
